FSD Laboratory 02

Aim: Design and develop a responsive web page using Bootstrap front end framework.
Objectives:
1. To understand HTML tags
2. To learn the styling of web pages using CSS
3. To learn Bootstrap Front End Framework.

Theory:
1. Bootstrap Grid System.
Ans. The Bootstrap Grid System is a powerful layout tool that allows developers to create responsive web designs. It uses a series of containers, rows, and columns to align content. The system is based on a 12-column layout, where you can specify the number of columns an element should span. For instance, you can create a three-column layout by assigning four columns to each element. The grid system is responsive, meaning it adjusts the layout based on the screen size, using predefined classes for different breakpoints (e.g., .col-md-6 for medium devices).

2. Bootstrap .container and .container-fluid class.
Ans. The .container and .container-fluid classes in Bootstrap are used to center and contain content within fixed-width or full-width containers, respectively. The .container class provides a responsive fixed-width container that adjusts its size at different breakpoints, ensuring consistent padding and margins. On the other hand, the .container-fluid class creates a full-width container that spans the entire width of the viewport, providing more flexibility for fluid layouts that occupy the full horizontal space. These classes help in structuring web pages effectively within the Bootstrap framework.

FAQ:
1. What is a responsive website?
Ans. A responsive website is designed to provide an optimal viewing and interaction experience across a wide range of devices, including desktops, tablets, and mobile phones. This is achieved through flexible layouts, flexible images, and CSS media queries, which adjust the website's design and content to fit different screen sizes and orientations. The goal of a responsive website is to ensure that users have a seamless and user-friendly experience regardless of the device they are using.

2. How Bootstrap helps to design a responsive website?
Ans. Bootstrap helps design responsive websites through its built-in grid system, responsive utilities, and pre-styled components. The grid system allows developers to create fluid, flexible layouts that adapt to different screen sizes using predefined classes for various breakpoints. Responsive utilities provide classes to show or hide content based on the device, ensuring the layout adjusts appropriately. Additionally, Bootstrap's extensive library of responsive components, such as navigation bars, buttons, forms, and modals, simplifies the development process, allowing developers to create a consistent and responsive user interface with minimal effort.

Problem Statement:

Design and develop a responsive web page (For example student registration, course enrollment, library management system, online shopping system etc.) using Bootstrap front end framework. Web pages should contain HTML5 elements (Use all possible formatting for example font, colour etc.).

Web page should include various

- images,
- links within the page,
- tables
- lists
- form elements
- paragraphs
- links to other pages for navigation,
- new tabs.

Use Cascaded Style Sheets (CSS) to style the web pages designed. Make use of
- Three types of styles (Inline, Internal and External)
- border,
- margins,
- padding,
- navigation,
- dropdown list
- tag selector
- class selector
- id selector
- exploring background image and position property etc.
